Intro + Slide 1: Meet Isa

(Let the intro animation play in silence. Start once "Meet Isa" is on screen.)

Good afternoon, everyone. We're Second Star Collective. I'm Matthew, and with me are Willis and Eliyas.

We would like to introduce you to Isa. She helps the volunteers who run the client's local chapters find answers, any time of day.

(Point to the bubble, bottom right.) And she's already in the room. That bubble in the corner is Isa, live. And in a few minutes, Willis will show you how she works.

Slide 2: Pipeline built

This sprint had one goal: build the pipeline.

Think of it as Isa's plumbing. A leader pours a question in at one end. Now that question flows all the way through, and comes out as an answer, or takes a different pipe and goes to a person.

One thing I want to mention up front: Not every part of Isa is fully built. Some components are simple placeholders for now, but Willis will show you which is which.

Slide 3: The problem

So, why build Isa? How does she actually help?

Well, picture yourself as a chapter president. You work full time. It's nine at night, and you need an election rule before tomorrow's board meeting.

(Point to the 6.) Six people support every chapter around the world. No team that size can keep up. And much of what they're asked already has an answer written down.

Slide 3: The problem

(Point to the two panels.) So Isa splits the work. If the answer is in the client's documents, she gives it to you. If it needs a person, she gets it to one.

She takes pressure off that team. She doesn't replace it. And she gives busy chapter leaders simple, fact-based answers quickly, when they need them.

Slide 4: What Isa promises

We built Isa around three rules.

(First card.) Isa builds every answer from the client's approved documents, and nothing else. She never reaches beyond what the client has given her. That keeps her within bounds. And every answer shows its source, one click away.

Slide 4: What Isa promises

(Second card.) Nothing happens behind a curtain. A leader can open up any answer and see each step Isa took, in plain language. That's what builds trust.

(Third card.) And Isa knows her limits. When she can't help, she says so, passes the question on, and the leader walks away with a number to quote when they follow up.

Slide 5: One question, ten stages

(Let the stages light up for a moment first.)

Let's follow one question from start to finish, beginning with the moment a chapter leader types it.

Isa checks who's asking, and whether it's something she should answer. She searches the client's documents. And she checks her own answer before it goes back.

(Blue bar.) Here's the clever part, and it saves money. If the documents already provide a clear answer, Isa simply gives it to the leader. The AI never wakes up.

Slide 5: One question, ten stages

(Dark blue bar.) If the answer has to be pieced together, the question takes the longer road, and that's where the AI comes in.

(Green bar.) And on either road, if Isa can't answer well, she opens a ticket and hands the question to a person.

That's the fundamental design. Now Willis will show you what's working today, live. Willis?

Slide 12: Additional features

(After Eliyas. Willis brings up slide 12.)

Thanks, Eliyas.

The focus of this sprint was the basic pipeline. But now that the water's running, we've started adding a few useful fixtures.

(Left side.) As chapter leadership turns over, someone new starts from zero. That's where our first fixtures come in. Onboarding guides a brand-new president day by day through their first 90 days, with a short note each day.

Slide 12: Additional features

Right from Isa, they can book a welcome call with their support contact, or write them a quick hello, and meet their board. The Succession Notebook lets a president record decisions, contacts, and notes from their daily work, and share them with the board. So the next president doesn't start from zero.

Slide 12: Additional features

And the Listen Library reads approved documents aloud, word for word, so a leader can listen on the way to work. All of these are in the app today, and we're still refining them.

(Willis opens the chapter tool sample.) Isa also points leaders to the tools they already use. These are sample pages we made, since the real ones sit behind the client's login. Here's the client's chapter tool.

Slide 12: Additional features

(Willis opens the community sample. Point to the Isa announcement.) And here's their member community. Oh, look. Word's already out: Isa has her own launch announcement. We haven't even finished the sprint.

(Willis goes back to slide 12. Right side.) This side is planned, not built yet: a few more fixtures for new leaders, like check-ins at 30, 60 and 90 days, and ways to reach leaders wherever they are, on a phone or in a browser.

Slide 13: Closing

(Pause a moment so they can read Isa's summary line at the top of the slide.)

And that brings us to the end of Sprint 2. What we set out to build is built, and it's working. Ask Isa a question, and you get an answer you can check, or a person who will follow up.

Thank you for helping us cultivate the skills to build Isa. We're very proud of her. We would love to hear your questions.

Keep in mind

Remember

- Say "the client," never the client's name, and don't name its member community.
- No AI timing (how many seconds an answer takes).
- Say "planned" for anything not built.
- Don't restart Isa during the talk: ticket numbers start again.
- Look at the room, not the card. Don't read the slide.
- Willis runs the slides. NEXT SLIDE marks where he moves on.

Keep in mind

If you're running long

- Slide 3: skip the "Picture yourself" story; start at the 6.
- Slide 5: skip the walk through the stages; keep the three bars.
- Slide 12: skip the sample pages, and say: "The fixtures on the left are in the app today; the right side is planned." Then move to slide 13.

Your timing

- Opening (intro, slides 1 to 5): about 3 minutes.
- Slides 12 and 13: about 1½ minutes.
